FINNISH REFUGEES STRUGGLE IN SNOW TO FIND NEW HOMES

Make A Search for Renewed Life in Their Reduced Fatherland

NUMBER HALF MILLION

Residents of Each Hamlet Hope To Settle Together

HELSINKI, Mar. 15—Struggling through a raging blizzard, thousands upon thousands of Finnish refugees left their homes in areas ceded to Russia today, and set out in search of a renewed life in their reduced fatherland.

From the Carelian Isthmus, the city of Viborg, the district north of Lake Ladoga and east of Salla, the Hangoe Peninsula and other regions turned over to Russia, they streamed—"a hand of refugees numbering almost half a million.

Carrying babies, bundles of food and clothing, and with furniture and other belongings piled high on every available conveyance, the refugees moved through the snow toward Finland's interior.

Residents of each hamlet, village and little town remained together, hoping to settle at some new point and perhaps build up a home similar to those they left behind.

Meanwhile, at the stroke of noon, Russian troops formally occupied the city of Viborg. Evacuation of the

Mark Anniversary Of St. Patrick's Day

Irish wit, humor, frivolity and a general good time marked the celebration of St. Patrick's Day, participated in last night by members of Bristol Exchange Club and their guests. This annual affair, which for the past several years has been under the direction and supervision of Dr. George T. Fox, attracted 60 men to the Elks Home. First there was a dinner, and this was followed by a program in the social session hall of the Home.

Words of welcome were given by Roy F. Fry, Exchange Club president, who turned over the conduct of the evening's program to Dr. Fox, a most genial master of ceremonies and a gracious host.

Group singing of familiar Irish songs and each individual present introducing himself in a humorous vein, acted as a levener and tended to good fellowship and a spirit of friendliness and sociability. Percy G. Ford and Keith Rosser, that inimitable harmony team, just made any resistance on the part of the men to singing, fade into insignificance. The harmony of "My Wild Irish Rose," "Harrigan," "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," and other selections of similar nature, were done full justice.

In his greetings Dr. Fox expressed his appreciation to the Elks for the courtesies of the building, to the participating artists and those associated with him in the program.

Moving pictures of "Scenes in Ireland" with sound, as well as a group of color films which brought out vividly the magnificence and beauty of that renowned country were shown by Edward Lee of Philadelphia. Mr. Lee, acting as guide, took the assemblage on an imaginary tour of Ireland which made one feel as though he was actually viewing at first hand that land of romance and charm.

As an impromptu speaker of the evening Dr. Calvin O. Althouse, Philadelphia, gave a discourse on St. Patrick and the land of his birth which at times convulsed his auditors with mirth, brought tears of appreciation as he dwelt upon the pathos of the Patron Saint's life, and inspired as he recited deeds of courage of not only St. Patrick but the Irish folks as well. He told of that charm of home life characteristic of the folks of Ireland in St. Patrick's time.

Dr. Althouse's talk was inspirational, entertaining, humorous and informative and was given in a manner which made time take wings.

Andrew MacArthur, singing "Father O'Flynn—Off to Philadelphia in the Morning" mixed his Scotch with an assumed Irish dialect and rendered the number in a most pleasing fashion.

Favors in the form of St. Patrick birthday cards with a piece of the Blarney stone attached were given as mementoes of the occasion.

Six Lose Lives in Blaze

Charlotte, N. C., Mar. 15—Fire raged with unchecked fury through the up-town Guthery Apartments in Charlotte today, claiming the lives of at least six persons and bringing serious injuries to within a dozen others, some of whom are not expected to live.

The disastrous blaze was first discovered shortly after 1 a. m. Before fire fighting apparatus could reach the scene, the entire three story, 24 family structure had become an inferno of flames.

A score or more families hurried into the wintry cold clad only in sleeping clothes. Damage to the building was estimated at $100,000.

Bond Salesman Starts Serving Term in Jail

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 15—(INS)—Duke E. Henkels, 45, stock and bond salesman and a World War hero, today began serving a term of five years in county prison after pleading guilty to charges of converting $65,000 of his customers' bonds to his own use.

Henkels confessed to embezzlement and fraudulent conversion before Judge Otto Helligman, who passed sentence immediately. Denying counsel's plea for leniency, the jurist remarked the defendant "is intelligent enough to know what he was doing."

A casualty company representative explained that Henkels used part of the money to pay off the mortgage on his home and put the rest into a chemicals corporation of which he was vice-president. Other officers of the corporation were unaware of Henkels' illegal activities, it was testified.

The victims who surrendered their bonds to Henkels included Harvey Mood, retired Doylestown farmer, $22,000; his brother, John Mood, $21,000, and William Thieroff, Doylestown, who lost a lesser sum.

KIWANIS CLUB HEARS OF BUSINESS OUTLOOK

C. A. Sienkiewicz, Federal Reserve Bank, Speaker At Doylestown Meeting

AN INFORMATIVE TALK

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 15—Business conditions and outlook were intelligently discussed Tuesday night by C. A. Sienkiewicz, of Doylestown, assistant vice-president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, at the weekly dinner meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Doylestown at the Doylestown Inn. Members were unanimous that the talk was one of the most informative ever presented before the club.

It was "Bankers' Night" and a number of local people connected with banks in official and clerical positions were among the guests.

Aside from the feature talk of the program the club was visited unofficially by the new Lieutenant Governor of this division, Elmer E. Menges, Ambler attorney. The state officer paid a tribute to Doylestown Kiwanis for their programs which he said ranked among the finest of any club in the state. He also complimented Doylestown Kiwanis for the efficient manner in which the club officers function.

Mr. Sienkiewicz reviewed in broad terms some of the main characteristics of business fluctuations in this country since 1933 and appraised certain principal factors underlying current business conditions.

Some of the conclusions reached by the noted authority on banking and business problems were as follows:

"National income payments are relatively high especially when expressed in terms of real purchasing power.

"There exists a large volume of unsatisfied demand for both producers' and consumers' goods.

"Our production system seems to be in reasonably good balance with respect to inventories and prices, despite sharp advances last fall.

"Ample and easy credit is available, but the present deadlock in credit and capital demands is a deterrent to increased business activity, and so to increased employment.

"While problems are many and perplexing, the domestic picture on the whole appears favorable, though war uncertainties complicate the outlook.

"Even should intensified war activity stimulate our business, the aftermath would be full of new problems, just as was the case after the first World War.

"Meantime, living in a world of interdependent economy and human relations, we cannot remain indifferent to the intensity, duration and consequences of the present conflict. In one way or another our interests will be affected whatever the conclusion of the war. The psychological and material effects upon us are already in evidence.

"Nations and peoples develop and prosper best in the state of world peace and unhampered trade.

"Our industrial and human horizons are broad and rich in opportunities. The ingenuity and technical skill which we are attaining already make our industrial laboratories veritable beehives of creative activity, changing the processes of nature and creating new materials to meet new demands.

Basic inquiries which we are making into the field of economics, government, and social sciences generally are resulting in improved knowledge and its application in dealing with current and prospective problems. We are also making important advances in human relations, better understanding, and appreciation of those fundamental values which improve relationships of man to man and employer to employee, even though there is still much to be done in combating ignorance, bigotry and prejudices."

The guest speaker, who was introduced by the club president, Harold Zeek, compared in an illuminating manner the state of our foreign trade at the present time with that which

The 20 men who attended that early gathering spread the tidings throughout the American Expeditionary Force that a caucus would be held March 15, 1919, in Paris.

Discussing those early days, a statement of Legion national headquarters in Indianapolis said:

AMATEUR ASTRONOMERS ARE BUSY AT SCHOOL

Laurel Bend Pupils Become Familiar With Various Constellations

RECORD BOOKS READ

This is one of a series of articles dealing with the activities in the schools throughout this area.

Many amateur astronomers are to be found in grades three and four at Laurel Bend School, this band of students making a special study of the stars.

The Lion, Cassiopeia, Orion, and numerous constellations are becoming more familiar to them each night, while during the day-time school periods they are making star books, with the star groups defined. Star maps appearing in daily newspapers are clipped to add to these books, and nearly every student in the room has discovered certain constellations on clear nights.

Miss Velda Thompson is the teacher, and both she and the students are greatly interested in adding to their room library. Some funds donated by the Parent-Teacher Association, and some derived from sale of candy, have been used to purchase books, which they enjoy during library period. These are listed under their names appearing on the wall chart titled "Books I've Read."

The adventures of Marco Polo have become more real to grade four pupils during the past four weeks, and as an aid they took to school various spines such as Polo found in the new world. This study is correlated with history and geography. The third grade group is now studying the state of Pennsylvania and its counties, and plans soon to become more familiar with the types of industry found in Bristol.

The two grades aid the teacher in regulating room temperature, they taking readings of the thermometer which are checked on a wall chart daily.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

A Double Game

Washington, Mar. 14.
IT may be that it is smart in Mr. Roosevelt to refrain from making any public statement on his third-term intentions. And he may be having a lot of fun in keeping the newspaper men guessing, the candidates jittery and the party generally in a state of feverish uncertainty. But there are those—and some of them friendly, too—who do not regard it as smart.

CONCEDING, for the sake of the argument, that the mystery enhances his influence both here and abroad and that the easiest way to control the convention is to garner delegates for himself, these things seem insufficient ground for playing what is clearly a double game with his friends. Wiser men in politics believe that being two-faced never pays in the end. There is so much evidence that Mr.

sold as high as 26 cents a pound.

The sale of the poultry alone amounted to $1625.98 and the proceeds of the entire sale approximated $3000.

Cattle also sold better yesterday, and during the afternoon eight cows changed ownership. They sold from $42.50 to $64. One Guernsey heifer went to the highest bidder for $60. Six bulls and four horses were offered, but it was impossible to dispose of them.

Twenty calves ranged in selling price from $2.25 to $14.50 and 31 goats sold from $1.10 to $11.25 each.

With men in charge of the program, problems relating to youth were considered at the meeting of Northampton Parent-Teacher Association held in Richboro high school building, last evening.

One of the questions for discussion was "Should a young boy own a car?" The discussion was opened by Osborne Feaster, who declared that no young boy should be permitted to own a car.

Continuing, Mr. Feaster said a high school boy should have the right to use the family auto, but at the same time he must be taught that the operation of an automobile involves a large expenditure. If given the right to use the family car, said Mr. Feaster, the boy should never abuse the privilege. It was also intimated by Mr. Feaster that boys often become what he termed road nuisances if given unrestricted use of the automobiles.

Physical education supervisors, Miss Matrona Walck and Horace Luff, had charge of the physical education demonstration in Buckingham high school gymnasium, Tuesday evening.

Over 100 men and women and young people witnessed the program, which included Virginia reel, rhythmic free hand drill, games, pyramids, volley ball game, etc.

All officers were re-elected for another year at the re-organization meeting of Southampton Chamber of Commerce, Tuesday evening.

Results of the election: President, Leon F. Carlin; corresponding secretary, Russell Severns; financial secretary, William A. Yerkes, and treasurer, Maurice Tomlinson.

President Carlin appointed the following committee chairman: publicity, William D. Lynch; membership, Monroe Fesmire, and sidewalk repairs, Monroe Fesmire. Melvin Severns served as chairman of the nominating committee.

Rotarians Dine On Crabs, Shrimp; Then Hear Speech

The development and the use of fire bricks in modern industry was the subject for a talk before the Rotary Club when J. G. Fritzinger, representative of the Carborundum Co., Niagara Falls, N. Y., addressed members at the Elks' Home here yesterday afternoon.

Fritzinger outlined the work of the three departments of his company, which included the manufacture of abrasive grinding wheels, glowbar heating elements and the manufacture of special fire brick in the refractory division.

The speaker pointed out that big industry today is dependent on the super refractory fire brick, a brick developed to withstand terrific temperatures. The manufacture of these bricks is made possible with the aid of electric furnaces.

Pictures revealing the contrast between the old style fire brick and the modern fire brick were shown by the speaker.

Preceding the talk, members and guests enjoyed a delicious shrimp and crab luncheon, the shrimp and crabs having been shipped by Edward Lynn, Jr., son of the Grand Theatre manager, by airplane from San Francisco, Cal.

BENSALEM SCHOOL "CIRCUS" OPENS TWO-NIGHT SHOW

Performers Pitch Their Tents and Present Acts in Big Annual Affair

A CAPACITY CROWD

The "Big Show" Was Smash Hit and Delighted the Spectators

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Mar. 15—The "circus" company which tramped into this village and pitched its tents upon the stamping grounds of Bensalem high school performed before a capacity crowd on its initial showing last night, despite the inclement weather. And with 325 or more performing brilliantly, the "big show" was a smash hit from the outset with interest and enjoyment running high.

Fortunately for those turned away when the house became packed, as well as others who were deterred by the weather, another performance will go on tonight.

The audience was brought into the atmosphere immediately upon their arrival as the "harkers" took up their posts at the entrance and proceeded to let the people know something about the performers in the "tents." Then there were the familiar "vendors" who peddled their stock of balloons, peanuts and crackerjack, candy, souvenirs, etc. To keep the atmosphere high the gymnasium was decorated in keeping with the circus background.

More color was added with the introduction of the entire troupe as they marched around the gymnasium while the band blared forth its distinctive music. Many of the characters drew applause and laughter as they paraded, especially some of the "freaks" of the show, the various "animals," clowns and other outstanding entertainers.

Samuel K. Faust, superintendent, made the introductory remarks in which he praised the work of the physical educational department for putting on the entertainment. He said the more than 325 persons taking part in the show represented approximately 60% of the school's enrollment from grades 7 to 12 inclusively. The school's slogan he said is "A sport for every boy, and every boy in a sport." That slogan was carried out in presenting the exhibition.

Following the parade, leaders club opened with a marching drill. Others included the flashlight, rope and exercise drills. The most unique was the flashlight drill, given by a group of Freshman boys who presented a fine exercise with red lights, making a pleasing effect with the "gym" lights off. The rope drill was a presentation by the 8th grade girls who went through various tricks in rhythm to the tune of "Over the Waves." Edith

MAKING RELIEF ATTRACTIVE

Mr. Henry Wallace's orange and blue stamps are now being distributed to those on relief in many cities, and he is rejoicing over the fact that at last he has found a shell game so clever that the most astute observer cannot locate the pea under the walnut hull.

But the cold fact still remains that getting something for nothing does not work and the new device should be thoroughly understood before it serves still further to make relief a permanent feature of this nation's national life.

The plan originated with the purchase by the Surplus Commodities Corporation of certain foods of which there was a temporary or local over-abundance. The public reaction against the destruction of food reached a climax after the killing of little pigs and the burning of wheat. There was resentment also when the government tried the experiment of selling surplus commodities abroad at a lower price than in the United States.

Then Mr. Wallace hit upon the idea of giving a relief family the option of buying not less than $4 nor more than $6 worth of orange stamps per week, to which would be added 50 per cent of blue stamps. The orange stamps could be exchanged at any grocery for foods of all kinds. The blue stamps could be exchanged only for those commodities designated as "surplus." If the purchase of orange stamps is $5, then the relief family is given $2.50 worth of blue stamps. It is an outright gift, available only to those on relief.

And yet there are thousands of persons in private employment whose income is no larger than that of the relief family. Suppose that a man who earns $20 a week goes into a grocery store. He spends $5 for groceries. But at his elbow he sees a reliever spend $5 for the same class of food and then spend his velvet of $2.50 for certain other foods designated as "surplus."

The man who has worked hard, in private employment, for his $20 and sees some one on relief spending a special bounty of $2.50 such as the private employe cannot enjoy naturally asks himself if it is worth while, after all, to struggle along and try to maintain his independence.

These stamps look like easy money. They are printing press money, but they have to be redeemed in real treasury money which was collected from taxpayers. Like all subsidies, it is paid for by the sweat of somebody's brow.

Mr. Roosevelt once said the only way to get rid of unemployment was to make relief less attractive than private employment. And if you look closely it is not hard to see the pea under the shell of giving something for nothing.

The CAIRO GARTER MURDERS

CHAPTER XV

The car whirled through a gate set in a long fence of elaborately wrought iron and servants posted sentry-like bowed very low as the car rushed on up a palm-shaded avenue toward a long, low structure of imposing dimensions. So this was the residence of Ben Yamen Hasid Pasha? Apparently the Egyptian's concept of a "small cocktail party" included the presence of guests brought by some thirty or forty cars.

Oddly enough, as North put foot on steps covered by a runner of deep crimson, he re-experienced that icy little trickle of apprehension down his spine.

"Until later, mon ami," Natika murmured when a very dark Moorish footman indicated the courtrooms.

Emerging, the man from G-2 was taken in tow by a solemn, over-stuffed English butler and conducted through a courtyard in which many persons stood about a graceful fountain drinking tea or sipping cocktails.

"This way please, sir," the butler murmured when North slowed as if to linger in the court. "His Excellency instructed me to show you to the magazine room. He is engaged, but will join you in a moment."

Left to himself, North sought the French window of a small but pleasant reading room opening off an inner court and lingered there watching a pair of coral-tipped flamingoes stalk about among lilies glowing in a shallow pool. How pleasantly cool it was in here—and quiet.

Ben Yamen Hasid, North promptly saw, was a connoisseur of furniture, paintings and rugs; and whoever had conceived the mansion's decorative scheme was a master of his art. . . . North started! What was that rustling sound? He reached the corridor just in time to see a girl stealthily glance over her shoulder, and slip into a room two doors away.

Almost as silently and quite as rapidly he started in pursuit of the prowler and followed her to a small study.

Somewhere a door creaked open, whereupon the dark-haired young woman darted behind a hanging and out of sight. North likewise took cover in the doubtful shelter of a bookcase.

Hasid Pasha's nervous voice drew nearer. . . . But my dear Colonel, your assumption is baseless. I am not interested in such a proposition. On the other hand, you will not regret it if—er—you follow my suggestion."

North, in his shallow refuge, kept his eyes riveted on the hidden girl's figure flattened behind a hanging of East India print. One hand was lost in the depths of her bag and her feet were adjusting themselves for some sudden movement. Distinctly he could see her rounded jaw set itself and the color fade in her face.

"Okay, Pasha. But right now I'm not saying 'yes,' and I'm not saying 'no.' I'll think things over and give you a buzz tomorrow."

Through that door across the room swung Stagg Melborne talking earnestly to Hasid Pasha.

As they neared, the lurking girl leered intently through a gap in the hanging, glanced back over her shoulder and saw North poised to rush upon her. Seldom had he been a look of more overwhelming dismay, or such frantic appeal to be still. Almost spasmodically, she closed her half-opened handbag.

Rigid and straight as a caryatid, she remained breathless, immobile, when Hasid Pasha and his companion walked by.

"Think over what I have said," invited Hasid Pasha. "I am sure that anyone of your intelligence will see the sensible course."

Presently the clacking of their heels died away on the polished parquetry floor of the hall.

The girl, very trim in a gray tailored suit and yellow blouse, muttered something in a foreign language.

Suddenly the girl darted from her hiding place and tried to escape into the courtyard, but North was far too quick. In a twinkling he had one hand on her handbag and the other on her elbow.

"Will you let me go?" she blazed, trying to squirm from his grasp. "Keep out of this!"

"I shall do neither and unless you give me some plausible explanation, I'll call Hasid Pasha and let him handle this. I daresay he'd be very interested to learn that a guest of his had come to tea with an automatie in her pretty little bag."

The unknown struggled furiously, brilliant lips writhing; color, welling into her face, rendered it not the less attractive. All at once she looked piteous. "Please, please! Let me go. I can explain everything! You are interfering in a matter of vital importance. Thousands of people may die if you interfere." She was vibrant with earnestness.

"What do you mean?"

"Hasid is not what you think. He's a menace."

"I see, and you were going to be judge, jury, and executioner?" He stared down into a pointed, faintly elfin face set with eyes of a midnight blue. "I don't believe a word of it. Besides, that's no excuse for you to go gunning for him."

"But, but I wasn't going to shoot him!" she panted desperately. "I was only trying to get something out of his office!"

While North did not credit her explanation he said, "I might let you go—on one condition."

"What is it?" she begged. "I must get back to the party. I—I'll be missed."

"Show me your garters."

"What?" Her eyes flew wide open and she flamed scarlet. "Really, you must be mad!"

"I'm not," said he ominously. "I never was more serious in my mispent life. If you don't show me, young lady, I'm going to see for myself."

"Why, I never— Well, I— She bent, caught her skirt just above the knees and lifted it an inch or two, then ducked under North's arm and went flying down the passage ere the man from G-2 could half turn. Apparently familiar with this great building, the girl quickly became lost to sight. Half amused, half alarmed, he made his way back to that sitting room in which the butler had left him.

"Ah, Captain, how good of you to wait," Hasid Pasha sauntered in, but, noting North's heated features, he became markedly vigilant.

"What has happened, my friend?" he demanded in succinct accents.

When North, with certain reservations, told him, the Egyptian listened without a reaction visible on his comely countenance.

"So? An odd little mystery, is it not? Not the sort of welcome home I had expected, but it makes the friendly ones all the more appreciated." He remained quite affable.

"Tell me, do you think you could recognize that young woman?"

North was on the point of giving a deadly accurate description but inexplicably decided against confidence, though his host seemed very far from a sinister person.

"Sorry, I'd only a blurred impression. She got away too quickly," was all he said.

"I'm greatly indebted to you nevertheless," Hasid declared. "Perhaps sometime I shall be permitted to express my appreciation. And now, shall we join my guests? Miss Ladd and her father are looking forward so much to meeting you again, and, of course, there is Miss Black—a girl most charming, no?"

Apparently a good many residents of Cairo were delighted to find Ben Yamen Hasid Pasha once more in their midst, nor were they for the most part insignificant folk. Among Captain North's neighbors were the French military attaché, the German minister, the Egyptian minister of war and a grim, gaunt Englishman who was pointed out as chief justice for the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. Present in quantity were Egyptian and British officers, most of them looking very sun-burned in white linens. A few, chiefly aviators, were in uniform.

It was evident to Hugh North's discerning eye that Hasid Pasha preferred his men intelligent and important, his women seductive and soignée.

"Hi, Captain! How's my fellow venturer in mysterious Egypt?" North felt a warming uprush of pleasure; the voice was so essentially and thoroughly American.

"Fine! How's yourself?" And his teeth gleamed in a wide grin when Lolita Ladd rushed up, eyes very round and excited.

"Mercy, but I'm glad to see you! Among all these celebs I feel like a poor little kitten dumped out of a sack after a trip."

"Well, you don't look it. You look more like a salad just out of the ice-box—all crisp and fresh," he assured her.

Eyes dancing, Lolita scanned the brilliant company. "Quite a few of the people off the ship, aren't there? Have you seen Monsieur Phillipides?"

North confessed he hadn't.

"Natika Black's here, too. Isn't she the loveliest thing? And such poise—wish I had some of it."

"You're all right as you are," North replied firmly.

She wrinkled her nose at him. "Very well, sir, we'll remain the sweet girl-graduate a little longer, all full of trust and enthusiasm. Just for your kind words I'll tell you what I'm going to do," she confided over the edge of a dainty glass.

"I'm going to have Dad invite you and Miss Black out to the college this week end. Maybe we can get that nice Dick Follonsbee to come along."

A gray cloud of memory fell across the brightness of the moment.

"I'm sure Follonsbee would like to come," he murmured, "but I doubt if he can get away."

"Oh, dear, I thought he was simply sweet, but I suppose he must be frightfully busy. Where are you staying?"

He told her. "Good. Zara will either phone you or send you a note and do please come out. You're so—so sort of reassuring." She gave him a little squeeze and darted off before he could reply.

Discuss Official Organ Of The Temperance Union

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union met at the home of Mrs. William DuHamel, Radcliffe street for the monthly session Tuesday evening.

The program was devoted to consideration of the Union's official organ, "The Union Signal." Several departments were considered, the "Washington Letter" edited by Izora Scott, Ph. D., the National W. C. T. U. legislative representative, is replete with the latest information concerning both the content and the presentation of bills, and the filibustering so frequently used by the opposition.

"What Dr. Hodge Learned from four Cocker Spaniels" proved most interesting. Dr. Hodge, a professor of biology at Clark University, Worcester, Mass., by a series of experiments determined the influence of alcohol upon the growth, intelligence, activity and offspring of dogs. He found that alcohol once a day, lowered resistance to infection, impaired endurance, and affected the nervous system in that fear was developed, a feature of alcoholic insanity and delirium tremens. The main objective of Dr. Hodge's study was to learn if, and in what way, alcohol influenced the puppies born; 19 died; 4 lived to maturity, while 17.4 per cent were normal. To the pair of dogs not given alcohol 45 puppies were born, four died, 41 lived to maturity; 90.2 per cent were normal."

Character building in a democracy was discussed showing that the three institutions mainly responsible, for building character are the home, the school and the Church. "The home based on the principles of integrity, honor and sobriety; and Christianity are the hope of the nation. Young people go forth from these homes equipped to meet any emergency and able to reject false influences. Where ministers of the Gospel fearlessly uphold right ideals and denounce lowered standards of conduct and prevalent vice, that church is an important character building agency."

Many school systems, it was pointed out, are introducing courses in alcoholic education, traffic problem pointing to the immediate need for this type of education.

Mrs. Ada B. Sands had charge of the religious phase of the meeting, while Mrs. Beswick, secretary, read minutes of the last meeting; and Miss Jane Rogers gave an encouraging report of the treasury. On April 9th, a meeting will be held at the home of Miss Laura Ellis, 210 Jefferson avenue.

Finnish Refugees Struggle In Snow To Find New Homes

Hanzoo Peninsula was in full swing, with hundreds of residents piling their furniture and other supplies on trucks and sleds.

Pressed by the necessity of turning over land to Russia and by the gigantic task of reconstruction facing them, the Finns were given new hopes for peace in the future, however, by an official announcement that Finland, Sweden and Norway formally have agreed to resume their security negotiations.

Helsinki, Mar. 15—The chances that little Finland might through some Herculean effort yet stage the 1940 Olympics appeared exceedingly slim today.

It was considered hardly possible that the tiny Republic could spare either the money or engineer from its huge reconstruction task to stage the games.

In a broadcast last night from Helsinki, Erwin Hartich, CBS Helsinki correspondent said a possibility for staging the Olympics there was "very slight."

ON THE SCREENS

RITZ THEATRE

Marlene Dietrich in the role of a frontier entertainer co-stars with lanky James Stewart in Universal's "Destry Rides Again" which opens today at the Ritz Theatre.

One of the season's most unusual pictures, "Destry Rides Again" is a marked departure from Miss Dietrich's recent screen roles. It is said to afford her a characterization greatly similar to her work in "The Blue Angel," the film in which she first attained stardom.

BRISTOL THEATRE

One of the most lavish movie fiestas ever staged is seen in Monogram's new color production, "The Gentleman From Arizona," now playing at the Bristol Theatre.

The picture was filmed entirely in and around Phoenix, Arizona.

As timely as 1940 itself is Monogram's thrilling spy drama, "Hidden Enemy," which opens today at the Bristol Theatre. The story of espionage in American industry, "Hidden Enemy" warns America to be on the alert.

GRAND THEATRE

About a year ago, a highly hilarious comedy called "Brother Rat" romped merrily across the screen, dealing with the adventures and misadventures of a trio of V. M. I. cadets and their rule-breaking prom "dates."

"Brother Rat and a Baby" picks up the same youngsters a year later and gives another chapter in their checkered careers. One of the gayest, most rollicking comedies to come out of Hollywood in many a moon, it was greeted with waves of appreciative laughter by the audiences at the Grand Theatre, where it opened yesterday.

Legion Roll-Call At All-Time High Mark

that this was to be an officer-dominated affair, or that it was designed to provide an organization for use of those who would deliver the soldier vote for some selfish political purpose.

With approximately 1,000 officers and enlisted men attending, a great caucus was held in the Cirque de Paris.

Eric Fisher Wood called the caucus to order in the absence of Theodore Roosevelt, who had returned to the United States to plan for the first caucus in this country.

Temporary organization of the caucus followed with selection of Bennett C. Clark, now a United States Senator, as chairman and Wood as secretary. As soon as Clark took the chair as presiding officer, a motion to eliminate all considerations of rank was proposed and adopted.

The United States caucus was held in St. Louis, May 8, 9, and 10 after a number of the A. E. F. Legionnaires had worked up sentiment in behalf of the budding organization in this country.

A tentative constitution was adopted and machinery was created to provide for permanent organization. In the months following the St. Louis caucus temporary headquarters were organized in New York and the work of organization went forward rapidly.

By act of Congress, the American Legion was chartered September 16, 1919. That charter gave official sanction to the constitution of the American Legion adopted at the St. Louis caucus.

Clearly, eloquently, concisely, the preamble noted as an historical document set forth the reasons for the creation of the Legion. It states:

For God and country, we associate ourselves for the following purposes:

"To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

The charter convention was held in Minneapolis, November 20, 11 and 12, 1919. That convention approved the acts of the temporary organization and adopted a permanent organization. Franklin D'Olier became the first national commander, Lemuel Bolles the first national adjutant. National headquarters were removed from New York and permanently established in Indianapolis.

chain within a chain was carved from one block of wood, seven by four by four inches.

Another result of his skill and patience is a wooden zipper six inches in length, containing about 60 minutely carved teeth. This particular piece of work took less than a week.

Another piece carved by Mr. Taylor is a wooden anchor on a wooden chain. He also has pliers carved of wood. He states it would have been easier to make the pliers from several pieces of wood, adding "but there wouldn't be any skill to it."

Much satisfaction is gained from the pastime, admits Mr. Taylor, who likes to attempt difficult things.

Stuhltrager, acting in the capacity as "gym" instructor, led a squad in the exercise drill by sophomore girls.

The Wild West, in part, was brought to life in two phases with a group of 7th grade girls and boys, offering an Indian war dance while, later some 8th grade boys presented a wild west show with Indian camp games. While so doing a band of cowboys came into their midst in a "covered wagon." One cowboy gave a lariat demonstration while another sang a Western ballad. The Indians, in both instances, were painted red and wore appropriate outfits.

Dances had their place in the entertainment—the square dance, "checkered" parade, soft shoe surprise, and "Dance the Next One with Me." The square dance was provided by the Junior Girls decked in styles of the '30's. A group from the girls' tap dance club presented the "Checkerette Parade," which was a "Broadway Tap Dance." Another "Chorus Girl" tap dance was offered by Jean Stuhltrager, Edith Stuhltrager, Dorothy Doyle, Josephine Call, Agnes Brummett, and Aurora Luzzi. Dressed in long silk gowns with shorts and blouses, they won a fine ovation for their fancy stepping under the blue spotlight. "Dance the Next One With Me" was a social dance by members of the dance club. Starting out as beginners learning to dance, they changed partners and danced to a popular tune.

Gymnastics were performed by both girls and boys on the apparatus, and by the tumbling clubs. The girl tumblers, decked as clowns, added color to the entertainment, and provided many laughs as they clowned through their exercises doing barrel rolls, layouts, head springs, etc., then finishing with a pyramid that "tumbled." The boys' tumbling club, performed difficult tricks then a few comical maneuvers.

Apparatus work was confined to the horse, buck, parallel bars, and rings by the girls; while the boys worked on the rings, horizontal bar, parallel bars, buck and pole. Both junior and senior high girls and boys worked, concluding with pyramids on the horse, buck and parallels.

Some Freshman girls, dressed in red, white and blue uniforms marched stiffly in the "March of the Wooden Soldiers." The girls took up their wooden weapons and marched around the gym to form the letter "B" from which position they went through their drill of shouldering their "guns." Passing the basketball, pushing a "dumbbell" up the floor with a wand, and a "horse race" in which the horse and jockey changed positions, were the contests participated in by Sophomore boys who were divided into three groups.

Every circus has its famous "side show"—and this circus was no exception. Out came all the "freaks" of the "big top." Among those introduced were the Siamese Twins, world's fattest man, human skeleton; strong man who lifted 2000 lbs. with ease only to be mortified by a small boy who picked up the weights and carted them off like so much paper. The world's tallest and smallest men, were there too, also the original organ grinder and his inevitable monkey, a grizzly bear, world's largest elephant; wild man from Borneo, who was caged and eating raw meat and bones of a wild animal. And lastly the "devil" himself, "up from the South Pole" for a visit, was introduced.

The "elephant" act was presented by a group of Junior boys who leaped over the parallel bars from a springboard, doing tricks and vaults. Probably the most pleasing bit of variety entertainment was offered by senior girls who presented the "ice ballet." They "glided" gracefully over the "ice" to the Skaters' Waltz and performed a fine drill. Prior to their entrance, six girls, Francis Stuhltrager, Edna May Vansant, Kathryn Harrison, Nalda White, Jane Noll and Margaret Funke, sang "The Skaters' Waltz." This act was well received despite two mishaps.

Throughout the show clowns made frequent appearances in the main tent to do a bit of clowning. They provided much laughter and entertainment as they tumbled and fell over each other, and tried to imitate feats. After the boys did their work on the apparatus, one clown hopped on the rings and was pulled halfway up to the ceiling before being lowered again. He proceeded then to chase his partner up a pole where the latter was left dangling from the ceiling when the former pulled the pole out from under him.

Later a "sharpshooting" David with a slingshot astounded the audience with his remarkable "ability" to shoot an ordinary soda cracker from the hand of his partner who was standing some 30 feet away from him. Then he did the same thing looking at a mirror.

The climax came when the pair tried to imitate some of the vaults over the parallels from the springboard which some Junior boys had just accomplished. One was "severely" injured whereupon the "rescue squad" rushed to the scene with an ambulance. They proceeded to bandage up the wrong clown and hauled him away while the other, unable to move because of the extreme pain, got up and chased the "first aiders" for their mistake.

The concluding act was the varsity sport tableau. First appeared an individual in uniform then another in the form of an image or Grecian art statue in silver paint. These individuals included for football, Charles Lehr, in uniform, and Charles Mudie; basketball, Bob Whyte in uniform, and Dick Colbert; wrestling, Charles Vansant and Jim Shapcott; track, Norman Miller and LeRoy Swan; and baseball, Barney Reynolds and George Strickler; hockey, Thelma Vandegrift and Eleanor Hughes; basketball, Mildred Smith and Dot Doyle, with Doris Ely; track, Naomi Foster and Marion Mills; baseball, Hazel Lamon and Marie Kalenbach with Pauline Freas. Each individual stepped into the spotlight with a characteristic pose seen in sports represented. Later the group posed together while a chorus echoed from the background Bensalem's "alma mater" which brought the curtain down on the final act.

The Physical Education Department of the school in charge of coaches George Reimer for the boys and Helen Smith for the girls presented the exhibition with a two-fold purpose; to provide fun for the participants, and entertainment for the spectators; and to show in some measure types of physical education activities that girls and boys of Bensalem participate in.

Busy Week-End Forecast For Croydon Roller Team

The Croydon Ramblers Roller Hockey team has a busy week-end when it plays Jersey City, a team with a splendid reputation, Saturday night, and the Yankee Clippers, of Allentown, on Sunday night.

Croydon players will try to dent each team to the best of their ability, as a victory over either team is something that many teams cannot boast. They are all hard players but good sports.

Game time is 11 p. m.

RECIPES: Those Which Interest Women

Made For Each Other

Preserves and cheese supply, each to the other that certain something! With Cheese Souffle, serve a generous mound of orange marmalade, or cherry, red currant or greenage plum preserves. With Cheese and Rice Croquettes, Welsh Rarebit or Cheese and Rice Au Gratin, serve cherry, gooseberry, plum or red currant preserves. And of course, there's always cheese (cream or American or cottage) with salty crackers and your favorite jam!

A Handsome Pear

Pair off a pear half with jam nestled in the center cavity, and top with whipped cream for dessert. Black Raspberry jam is especially toothsome with this!

Takes the Cake

Cake filling that takes no more time than the removal of a neat cap from a jar of "ready-made" preserves makes layers and cup cakes yummy and lets the cook take her ease! Just spread any thick preserve between layers and top of cake and sprinkle with chopped nuts; needs no frosting!

Following their pleasant custom of serving a jam or preserve with the meat course, clever cooks have learned to "match up" flavors—choosing just the right accent to point up the flavor of the meat. Here's a handy choice-chart to follow—and a chance to get acquainted with all the many jars of preserves your grocer has in such variety!

WITH	SERVE
Veal	Grape Jam
Lamb or Mutton	Greenage Plum Preserves
Roast Pork	Gooseberry Preserves
Ham	Youngberry Jam
Sausage	Orange Marmalade or Cherry Preserves
Smoked Tongue	Grape Jam
Chicken or Turkey	Cherry Preserves
Duck	Plum Preserves
Goose or Wild Goose	Gooseberry Preserves

A New Topper for "Flappers"

"Flappers" or griddle cakes, waffles or French toast go high-hat and twice as tasty when you serve them with a spread made of butter and jam or preserves. Dish out a half-cup of ready-to-serve preserves from the glass jar (strawberry, apricot, pineapple, red raspberry are recommended); heat and blend it with a fourth-cup of butter; add a dash of salt. Serve hot, serve plenty!

Muffin Magic

The next time you make muffins, drop a teaspoon of preserves on top each muffin before baking. You will buy your preserves all ready "put up" of course, in convenient wide-mouthed glass jars. Another muffin trick is to cut a circular section out of the top of each one, fill with jam or marmalade, replace the "lid" and serve—muffin and stuffing! all at once!

Economy in Lamb Dishes

There was the time when lamb was associated only with the spring of the year. Now improved methods of production and distribution make lamb available all seasons.

Right now there happens to be lamb of very high quality on the market, and every thrifty housewife will want to take advantage of that fact. It is a choice meat, tender, juicy and flavorful. The flavor of lamb is so distinctive that it gives welcome variety to any menu.

For an economical and very good lamb dish, try stuffed lamb shanks with barley. This is suggested by Inez S. Willson, home economist.

Stuffed Lamb Shanks

6 lamb shanks
2 tablespoons lard
2 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 pound barley

Brown the lamb shanks in hot lard. Add water and season with salt and pepper. Cover and simmer until tender, about one and a half hours. Remove the meat from the broth. When cool enough to handle, remove the bones. Cook barley in lamb broth, adding water as necessary. Stuff boned shanks with cooked barley. Place in kettle. Add gravy made by thickening remaining lamb broth. Cover and heat thoroughly.

Here is another dish that spells economy and makes use of a cut you might not think of immediately. The flavor combination in this dish is particularly savory. You'll want to serve it often.

Spanish Lamb Neck Slices

6 neck slices of lamb
2 tablespoons lard
6 slices onion
5 slices tomato
6 rings green pepper
1/4 cup rice
Salt
Pepper

Brown lamb neck slices on both sides tied to a dock. Little Ann likes the sides in hot lard. Cook rice in boiling salted water until done. Drain. Place browned neck slices in an oiled casserole dish. On each slice, put a slice of onion, one of tomato and the green pepper ring. Fill this with cooked rice. Add one-half cup water, cover and cook in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until the neck slices are done, about one hour.

Shoulder of lamb makes an excellent roast. It is easy to carve and carries with it the full, rich flavor of lamb.

Roasted Shoulder—Currant Glaze

Roasted lamb shoulder
Salt and pepper
1/2 glass currant jelly
Mint leaves

Have lamb shoulder boned and rolled at the market. Season and place fat side up on rack in open roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer and roast in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) until done. Allow 40 to 45 minutes per pound for roasting. A few minutes before serving, spread the roast with currant jelly, and return it to the oven until nicely glazed. Serve with a currant-mint sauce, made by seasoning currant jelly with finely chopped mint.

PREFERS SLOOP TO HOME

BOSTON — (INS) — No rent, taxes, lawn to mow and very little snow to shovel. Those are some of the reasons Frank Stratton lives with his wife and six-year-old daughter, Ann, on a 26-foot sloop in Dorchester Bay. Stratton commutes to work in the summer in a row boat. In the winter the sloop idea, too. "I swing myself to sleep in my hammock," she says. "There aren't any shouting people and I can hear the waves kissing the sides as I go to sleep."

If you have a house to rent, advertise it in The Courier.

ESCAPE FROM UTOPIA

COLUMBUS, O. — (INS) — Ordinarily there would seem to be no need for an avenue of escape from Utopia, that imaginary island of perfection. But Ohio WPA workers are about to build one anyway. Utopia in this instance, however, is a village with a population of 60 persons on the bank of the Ohio river. WPA will build a road which residents may use as a means of escape when the Ohio overflows its banks.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT
BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

Why lug the Drum when you can twirl the Baton?

4-door touring sedan $896*

YOU never yet saw a band come down the street without someone out in front setting the tempo, while someone back in the crowd obediently thumped in time.

So you'll get what we mean when we ask, right out, why drive a car that's along just for the march—when you can pilot a Buick and show the others the way?

Maybe someday the others will have engines like velvet because they're electrically balanced after assembly; but Buick has them now.

Maybe tomorrow they will have coil springs all around that never need greasing—but Buick has them today.

Maybe sometime you'll get the five-foot front seat room and Foamtex cushions of the SUPER—maybe you'll get direction signals with automatic cut-off as standard equipment—but you can get those things and a lot besides on Buick this year.

Maybe someday you'll get a car as long as Buick for the money, or with a frame as heavy without paying more; maybe sometime there'll be another eight as big and roomy and powerful that's priced like a six.

But why take a chance on those maybes when this honey's here, ready for you to take over right now?

Fact is, when you step into this Buick you take over a car others will be trying to equal for years to come.

So drop in on your Buick dealer. Drop in to talk facts and figures, or drop in to see what next year's cars will try to look like.

But drop in! Soon!

Followed the outbreak of the World War 25 years ago.

From August to December, 1914, he pointed out, our exports declined sharply to $913,000,000 as compared with $1,200,000,000 in the same period of 1913. The volume of imports also declined. Being a debtor nation, the shrinkage in our exports affected adversely the dollar exchange in London and tended to aggravate already unfavorable business conditions at home. But as war continued, our exports increased considerably, rising from $200,000,000 in 1914 to $3,600,000,000 in 1915.

That situation was contrasted by Mr. Sienkiewicz with the present developments. He said that our exports in the seven months through January 1940 exceeded $2,100,000,000, an increase of 24 per cent over the corresponding period a year earlier. Our imports also increased substantially, but the excess of exports over imports in this period was about $600,000,000. In January this year, our exports amounted to $585,550,000 or 73 per cent above a year ago and the largest for any month since March, 1930.

The excess of exports over imports in that month, the speaker pointed out, reached almost $127,000,000, the largest since October, 1929. The increase in the actual volume of goods traded between this country and the world was substantially larger, as prices have declined sharply in the past 10 years. Much of the increase in our sales to foreign countries was in raw cotton and semi-manufactured goods, while the largest gains in our purchases from abroad were in rubber and wool.

Our exports to five European neutral countries—Italy, Norway, Sweden, The Netherlands and Switzerland—in the seven months through January, 1940, increased to $215,000,000 as against $143,000,000 a year earlier, an expansion of 50 per cent. Exports to South American countries also increased from $160,000,000 to $227,000,000, a rise of 42 per cent in the same period. Our exports to two belligerent countries—the United Kingdom and France—from July 1939 through January 1940 amounted to $491,000,000, an increase of 28 per cent over the same period of 1938-39.

"These figures," the speaker pointed out, "show a substantial expansion in our foreign trade and are in sharp contrast with the trend that took place in the same period 25 years ago. Whether or not the present rate of increase in our exports will continue largely depends on war developments abroad."

Speaking of industrial production, Mr. Sienkiewicz said that it has declined since the turn of the year, the Federal Reserve Board's adjusted index in January dropping to 120 and in February to 109. Business analysts generally, he said, interpret this drop as not necessarily an unhealthy one, as it indicates an effort to maintain balances between supply and demand for goods—a better balance between output and distribution. The present decline in output is not looked upon as the beginning of a severe and prolonged depression. As a matter of fact there are already signs indicating sustained activity in many basic lines where deficiencies continue apparent both in durable goods and to a certain extent in consumers' goods.

ON the other hand, that little group of New Deal intimates which includes the blatant and venomous Mr. Ickes; the youthful Attorney General, Mr. Jackson, and those two "bright boys" who write the White House speeches—the Messrs. Corcoran and Cohen—have exactly the other idea. Every one of these has close personal contact with the President. They are his unswerving and adoring retainers. They are quite convinced that he wants the nomination and that their efforts to "draft" him meet with his entire approval. He has managed to make the same impression upon various machine politicians who have declared for him and also upon his private secretary, General Watson, who has set money that he will be renominated.

DESPITE the fact that his recent attitude has been one of almost open connivance with the third-term engineers, there are intimates among his journalistic retainers who assert with confidence that he has no intention of permitting himself to be nominated. But there are others, with just as good a record for being on the White House inside, who insist that his renomination and election for a third term are foregone conclusions. They scoff at the idea that he will not accept, and point out that while the Messrs. Corcoran, Cohen, et al., have not often been right about political policy, in the past they have always been right about what the President would do.

FOR this confusion of thought among his personal intimates, among the politicians and with the public, Mr. Roosevelt, of course, is responsible. It is due not so much to his failure to make a public statement but to the fact that privately he has convinced some that he wants to run and some that he does not. He hasn't been frank with his friends. He has told some of them one thing and led others to believe the opposite. Those capable of a detached judgment cannot reconcile what he is doing and the way he has been talking with the idea that he will make the third-term attempt. It does not, they say, make sense. On the contrary, it seems to them that no man who had not definitely made up his mind that he is retiring could play the game this way. Because it is essentially a double game and bound to leave a lot of people pretty sore.

GRUNDY FIVE WINS FIRST OF SERIES FOR LEAGUE HONORS

Wool Twisters Defeat Profy Team by Score of 51 to 42

GAME CLOSELY PLAYED

Had Only Four-Point Lead At Start of Last Minute and Half of Play

BRISTOL BASKETBALL LEAGUE

Result of last night: Grundy's, 51; Profy's, 42; Manhattan, 53; Langhorne, 45

Taking the lead from the start and keeping it throughout the entire 40 minutes of play, the Grundy team won the first of a three-game series to determine the championship of the Bristol Basketball League, beating out the Profy five, 51-42.

Although the final score shows the woolen workers ahead by 9 points, the tilt was more closely played than the score indicates for with but one and one-half minutes remaining to be played, Grundy's had a 4 point lead and this was quickly cut to two points by a Profy score.

However, Grundy's wasn't through and before the period was over, Zack, Nowalinski, and Gallagher scored double-deckers and Kelly made a foul. The radomen had given up all hopes by this time.

The scoring honors for the winning combination was divided between Johnny Zack and Reds Gallagher who made 17 and 14 points, respectively. However, in justice to Zack, it must be stated that he spent considerable time on the bench because of having three personal fouls against him.

The radomen were failures from the foul mark, having fifteen tries and making but six. The Grundymen lost both Jesse Vanzant and Ralph Narcisi via the foul route in the last quarter of the fray.

Bucks Profy was high scorer for the losing team with ten points. Grundy's had a total of 22 double-deckers to the Mill street team's 18.

LANGHORNE RED RAIDERS BOW TO MANHATTAN FIVE

Despite a strong second-half finish, the Langhorne Red Raiders bowed to the Manhattan Soap Company team, 53-45, last night in the preliminary game played on the Italian Mutual Aid floor.

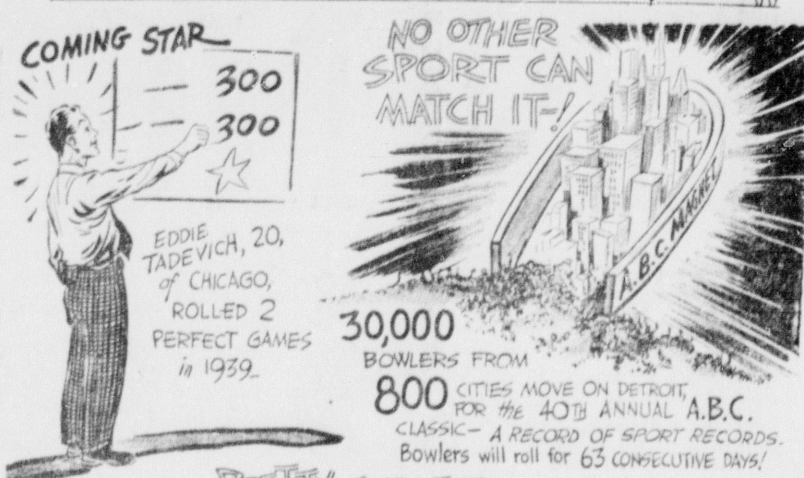

The soap workers had a 14-point lead at half-time but this was gradually diminished in the third period as the Langhorne team came within two points of deadlocking the score. The Manhattan again built it up to a 44-31 score at the end of the third session.

In the fourth period, the Red Raiders again put on a scoring spree and this time came within two field goals of tying the count but again the boys of Charlie Dugan was equal to the task and began to sink in enough points to clinch the game.

Barbetta, Zeffries, Snyder and Huffell did the bulk of the scoring for the winners with Breigle and Everitt doing the best for the losing team.

In the preliminary game for Monday night, the Bristol Scholastics is matched with the Morrisville Scholastics.
